

ANTI-KNIFE DAD KILLED 'JUST LIKE TRAGIC BEN'

A MUSICIAN who performed anti-knife crime songs has been stabbed to death in a killing compared to tragic Ben Kinsella's.

Aaron Buron died after trying to stop Haydan O'Callaghan attacking his girlfriend.

O'Callaghan, 18, chased dad-of-two Aaron into the street, stabbed him three times and walked off, leaving the knife sticking out of his chest.

Judge Patrick Eccles sentenced O'Callaghan to a minimum 21 years for murder at Oxford Crown Court.

He described Aaron, 29, as a "fine and innocent young man", who "was simply trying to help someone else". And he compared his killing to the 2008 North London murder of Ben – brother of EastEnders Brooke Kinsella. Like Ben, 16, Aaron was "hunted down" by his attacker and stabbed in the street.

And chef Aaron wrote anti-knife songs – while Ben had penned a letter to then PM Gordon Brown, urging him to stamp out knife crime. O'Callaghan attacked his girlfriend at a house in Oxford and grabbed a knife from the kitchen after Aaron and pals intervened. The thug made a crude one-finger gesture at Aaron's family after being convicted.
